

Seeking healthy volunteers for metabolism study

Why do we come in different shapes and sizes?

Researchers at the National Institutes of Health (NIH) in Bethesda, Maryland, want to study how hormones, metabolism, genes, and behavior affect body weight in patients of all sizes: normal weight, overweight and obese.

Who is eligible to participate:

Healthy adult men or women, 18 years of age and older, who are obese, overweight or normal weight.

What is involved:

This study consists of both inpatient and outpatient visits and can include evaluation of hormones, sleep, eating behavior, taste perception, physical fitness and psychological testing.

All study-related tests and procedures are provided at no cost to you. Participants may be compensated.
